

Interviewer Tips

Stories, histories, wisdom and knowledge have all been passed on orally throughout most of human existence; thus, both interviewer and interviewee should take pride and enjoyment in honoring this ancient tradition.

Allow ample time for the interview; once memories get flowing it is easy to spend several hours reminiscing. Where possible, interviews should be conducted in the actual location pertinent to the interviewee's memoirs. Interviewers should take necessary steps to provide for their and their subjects comfort (a comfortable chair, a cup of water, etc.), as well as removing - wherever possible - extraneous distractions.

Be sure to test the recording device, volume settings and battery life before beginning. Take notes during the interview; this allows you to readdress topics without interrupting the interviewee's current train of thought. Have a camera with you so you can photograph related items referred to during the interview. It is a good idea to type a transcript shortly after the interview - while it is fresh on your mind. Ask the interviewee for a follow-up interview if time gets cut short or if more material comes to light.
